- On 20 October 1950, 31 single-engine, low-wing monoplanes, parked in two rows opposite each other, were counted on the northern edge of the Doeberitz (N 53/2 65) airfield. About 30 planes of the same type were on the southern edge in front of the hangars, and two biplanes on the western edge. Description of single-engine, low-wing monoplanes: three-bladed propeller, antenna on front section of cockpit roof, weapon in cockpit and pointing upward to the rear, nose pointed, rudder assembly spade-shaped. There was no flying or activity at the field between noon and 1 p.m. in hazy weather. *

- * Comment. The aircraft strength at the field has apparently not changed compared with previous observations. See
Two ground attack regiments are still believed to be stationed in Doeberitz.
